CHURCH FOUNDER DIES IN MOKENA

Rev. Paul Roesener Once Synod Head; Master 7 Languages

Rev. Paul Carl Theodore Roesener, D. D., aged 86 years, died Friday morning, 6:40 o'clock, of pneumonia in his home in Mokena. He has been in poor health for sometime before he became ill with pneumonia.

Rev. Mr. Roesener lived a full and interesting life and was a scholar of note in Lutheran church circles. He was master of seven languages, namely: Latin, Hebrew, Greek, Polish, German, English and French.

He was born in Berlin, Germany, February 28, 1853. He received his education in the institutions of learning at Erfurt and Breslau.

In the year 1874 he immigrated to the United States, first locating in Newark, N. J. Here he taught German and studied the English language. Later he went to New York City and while there became acquainted with the renowned Presbyterian theologian, the late Dr. Schaff who at that time was the head of the Union Theological Seminary in New York City. He soon discovered that Rev. Mr. Roesener was a scholar in the classics and encouraged him to enter the ministry. Being more inclined to the Lutheran church than the Presbyterian, Mr. Roesener entered the Concordia Theological Seminary of the Lutheran church in St. Louis, Mo., in 1876. He was ordained as a minister of the Gospel in 1877 and was assigned to his first charge in Little Rock, Ark.

He served as president of the Western District of the Missouri Synod of the Lutheran church for many years. He established many Lutheran church missions in Missouri, Texas, Louisiana and other southern states which soon developed into self sustaining congregations which today serve as living monuments to his untiring work, spreading and establishing the kingdom of his Master and Lord.

He returned to New York in 1898 and served as vice president of the Atlantic District of the Lutheran Synod until 1922. He retired from the active ministry and located in Mokena in 1923 and has resided here since.

On Feb. 28, 1878 he was united in marriage with Miss Maria Miller of Red Bud, Ill. To this union nine children were born, six of whom preceded the parents in death. Mrs. Roesener passed away several years ago.

Surviving are: one son, Paul; two daughters, Mrs. Elizabeth Helmuth, Miss Clara Roesener, and seven grand children all of Mokena; one brother of Mainz-on-the-Rhein, Germany, and one sister, residing in Berlin, Germany.

Funeral services were held Monday afternoon from the late home to the Immanuel Lutheran church in Mokena with Rev. C. Waech of Crete and Rev. W. J. Geffert of Mokena, officiating. The body was shipped to Red Bud, Ill., where burial was made Tuesday in the family lot in the Lutheran cemetery.

Rev. Mr. Roesener had a very extensive and valuable library containing many volumes of noted authors in foreign languages.

Mokena Pioneers Resting Place To Be Beauty Spot

The old public cemetery located on the south end of the village of Mokena along Wolf Road, has been neglected for a great many years. This is the last resting place of a group of the early pioneers who settled in this section about 100 years ago. One grave, that of Charles Denny, a soldier in the Revolutionary War, dates back to 1832 when this patriot of Washington's time, was buried.

This cemetery has not been used for burials for over half a century or more and as a result, has been in a very neglected state. Weeds and brush have obscured the modest tomb stones that marked graves of now practically unknown settlers of this section.

The village board of Mokena, at various times has hired men to cut the brush and weeds and thus try to keep the old burial ground in a half-way respectable shape.

But now the Mokena Garden Club has taken a vital interest in this old time resting place, and has decided to make it a beauty spot.

The tract has been cleared of weeds and brush, and this coming summer, flowers will be planted and the cemetery will be kept in a neat condition. All of this is a credit to the civic spirit of the Garden Club. Plans are underway now for further improvement of the old burial plot.

Uncle Hy. Gets The Raspberries

Mokena, Ill.

Dear Bill:

Who's this busted down Real Estate salesman who signs himself Hy? As a story teller, he is strictly phooey. Say, I'll match my story of the traveling salesman and the farmer's daughter against any of his.

As for being a salesman; why that guy couldn't sell ice water in Hades! He doesn't know that things have all changed in our little old town. Why, Bill, you and I can remember when they used to lock up the drunks and bums in the village hoosegow. Now they lock up the jail to keep the bums out! Now that's progress! Talking about progress, say I was out in the country the other day and walked in the cow barn to see a feller. I had a lot of things on my mind and kind of forgot where I was at for a minute and started to look around. Well, everything was all white and shiny; a guy walks up to me in a white suit and says, "What can I do for you, Mr.?" and I says "Give me a chocolate Soda." Darned if I didn't think I was in an ice cream parlor it was so clean and bright. You know, Bill, that's real progress!

This guy Hy says people in Mokena don't smile any more. Hades! fire, Bill, they just can't, cause they laughed themselves sick since Wild and Woolly Wallace started his corn program. First he pays you dough to cut your corn acreage, so you won't raise so much corn; then he turns around and sells 'em hy-bred seed so they can raise more corn!

If this keeps up you can tell that half-wit, Hy, the real estate man, even he will be selling farm land for $1,000 an acre again.

Why it's getting so bad the rats over at Capple Bros., elevator won't eat your corn unless you join the AAA program; and over Frankfort way the darn old crows won't eat anything but hy-bred corn.

Old man Wallace sure has got things fixed up alright; he hopes!

Say, Bill, did you hear about that fella over near Tinley Park by the name of Wallace?

He had to change his name 'cause one day the hired man comes out of the barn and gives a yell "Oh Mr. Wallace." And darned if all the cows didn't get so scared they went dry and the pigs lit out for the next county. He's still rounding them up, and he found four calves scared to death!

But at that, old Henry Wallace ain't as bad as some of those other New Dealers, at least he knows a horse from a pig; 'cause he didn't kill any horses during the great massacre in 1935 and '36. Look at Hopkins, the guy never even run a peanut stand in all his life; so they make him Secretary of Commerce, and Ma Perkins never had a baby or scrubbed a floor, so they make her Secretary of Labor. At that rate, me being broke, I ought to be Secretary of the Treasury!

You know, Bill, I kind of think this guy Hy is a New Dealer!

Your Pal,

Mokena Mike.

ORAM ADHERENTS BOOST HIM FOR SUPERV. OFFICE

The office of supervisor is an important one and should be held by a man who thoroughly understands the workings of our county government as well as our local township government. He should be honest as well as efficient. He should supervise the spending of our tax dollars wisely. He should abide by all our laws and see that others also obey them. He should keep a perfect set of books which should be in balance with those of the town clerk at all times. He should not hesitate to show them to any resident of the township when requested. He should be fair and impartial to all the unemployed who need assistance, not favoring those in his own "clique."

Mr. Oram is such a man. He has had wide experience in local government affairs and has always been known to be honest in all his dealings.

His opponent asks to be re-elected on his accomplishments while in office. What accomplishments? He claims credit for getting Cedar St. paved, for the new bridge across Hickory creek, and even getting Washington Street paved into Joliet. We all know better than that but that seems to be the only thing accomplished around here in recent years and he has to say he did something. Those who actually did work to get these roads paved are not asking credit for it, neither do they like to see some politician trying to take the credit to get votes for himself.

Mr. Oram will make a good supervisor because he will do what he is elected to do. He will be fair to all and will be a credit to New Lenox Township. When you go to the polls Saturday vote for Mr. Oram for supervisor. It will be a vote for good government.

Oram for Supervisor Com.

May Pay Taxes In Two Installments

The tax payers of Will County have been raising the question as to whether or not, the two installment periods of paying taxes, will be continued under the new administration.

When interviewed, James Bell, county treasurer, stated that there will be two installments as heretofore.

The first installment will become delinquent on June 1 and the second installment, September 1. By making it possible to pay taxes in two six-months periods, it makes it easier for the average tax payer to meet his tax bill.

H. WEIMAN ONE TIME FRANKFORT RESIDENT DIES

Henry Weiman, widely known former resident and furniture dealer of Frankfort who of late years has resided in Chicago Heights, died last Saturday, February 18 following a seige of pneumonia as an aftermath of an attack of flu. His illness was of short duration. Mr. Weiman attained the ripe old age of 92 years last December. While residing in Frankfort in the place now occupied by B. Zechlin, an epidemic of illness in his family resulted in the death of all but one of his large family.

Mrs. Weiman died a few years ago. The only living member of this once large family is a daughter, Mrs. Lydia Werner of Chicago Heights. The next nearest relative is a nephew, Norman Weiman and his family, also of Chicago Heights. Funeral services were held on Tuesday of this week with burial in Pleasant Hill cemetery in Frankfort.

More Home Training Needed

In last week's issue of this paper I was interested in the "Musings of a Father" because the author of this article stressed the importance of home training for children. That is something which needs more emphasis today than ever before.

A writer of the past century summarized home training in these words: "Children are not so much to be taught as to be trained. To teach a child is to give him ideas; to train him is to reduce those ideas to practice."

It seems to me that the emphasis today is on Teaching while Training is being neglected. That is not going to do the future of our country any good.

What has caused this change? Why is home training being neglected in favor of teaching in schools and churches? The writer of last week thinks that ignorance, lack of understanding or laziness is at the bottom of this change. He is right. However, I would add to this the loosening of the home ties. Parents today spend more time at golf courses, night clubs, bridge parties, movies, society meetings, etc., etc., than at the fire-side with their children. They depend entirely on the school and the church to teach and train their children. While these noble institutions have been established for the purpose of teaching, they cannot supplant home training.

Yes, home training is gradually becoming a lost art. This is tragic because the saying is still true today: "As the tree is bent, the tree is inclined." Untilled soil produces no corn. Children, after all, are like young birds, which imitate the songs of the old ones. Parents who spend much time in the gutter should not be surprised when their children later on grunt like pigs.

By HAROLD CHANNING WIRE

SYNOPSIS

Jim Cotter, forest ranger, had been mysteriously killed in the pursuit of his duties. Gordon Breck, his best friend, takes over Cotter's job, hoping to avenge his murder. "Dad" Cook, forest superintendent, warns Breck that the Tillson brothers, mountain moonshiners, are apt to give him trouble. Before leaving for his mountain station, Breck buys an outfit and decides to attend the public dance run by the Tillsons in Lone Tree. At the dance Breck dances with Louise Temple, pretty "cowgirl" for whom he takes a liking. Unknown to Breck, she is being courted by Art Tillson, youngest of the three Tillson brothers. Angered by Breck's attentions to the girl, he picks a fight which ends indecisively when someone sets fire to the hall. Breck and his chief set out for the mountain station. Halfway, they are met by Sierra Slim, moss-back mountaineer who is also in the forest service. Around the campfire that night, Breck learns from Sierra that tracking down Jim Cotter's murderer must be done cautiously and by devious methods. Cook, Breck and Sierra continue their ascent of the mountains. Stopping to rest, they sight the Tillsons, returning to their hideaway. Next day, Cook sends Breck and Sierra in one direction to repair the telephone line, while he takes another. Over the campfire at night Sierra tells Breck more about Louise Temple. "That kid's a thoroughbred," he says. He also believes that Art Tillson is not essentially "bad," but is the victim of circumstances. Returning to Cook's camp, Breck is directed to go to Rock House Meadow, his permanent base. On his way, he is the target of a pistol shot from an unseen assailant. The bullet misses, but his frightened pack animals bolt and Breck goes in pursuit. Finding a deserted cabin, he takes shelter from the rain. A moment later two of the Tillson brothers arrive and Breck hides in the cabin loft. Then Art Tillson arrives. Breck hears the three Tillsons discuss a plot against his life.

Hep lunged. Art doubled his fists. Jud halted both with a look from narrowed eyes. "Art," he said, and the cold quality of his voice carried meaning far beyond his words, "you made a mistake. I told you to stop that fellow, and you knew what I meant." He paused, rigid, save for a slow movement of jaw muscles. "Next time you do it!"

Art turned impulsively. "Damn it, Jud, ain't I had enough of this? What's it going to get me anyway?"

"It has already got you a herd of a thousand cattle. I'm giving you that."

"Yeah, with a fine lot of strings! I've got to keep 'em here on Sulphur Creek and work for you whenever you say. To hell with it!"

"Just the same," Jud urged, "they're yours."

Art rolled a cigarette, surveying Jud from over the edge as he licked it. "All right, if they're mine I can do what I please with them. So I'll just stop the bunch tomorrow and graze this season on Temple Meadow."

A sneer came across the stove from Hep. "Sweet! I reckon that would suit Louy."

"You leave Louy out of this. I know what you're thinkin'!"

"And I know what you're doin'!"

This time Jud made no move to interfere. Art's fist flashed over the fire. Hep slumped and when he rose Art followed, knocking him back into one corner.

Breck found his own teeth clenched. He looked down upon Art Tillson with new understanding.

In a moment Hep got up, wiping a bloody mouth and muttering under his breath. Art ignored him.

"Now then," Jud said casually, "if you two fools have got it over with, we'll talk business. We might as well keep in here until daylight, then you'll go meet your herd at the summit, Art, and shove 'em down Sulphur. Hep and I'll go direct to camp and fix things here. As for that fellow—next time I lay out a job, you work on it. No more mistakes!"

Hep drew a box near the stove and sat down, closing his eyes. Jud remained standing, hunched over the fire. Art went outside. He was gone only a minute then reappeared in the door.

"Jud, there's a couple of packs at the corral!"

Instantly the stove was covered again. Hep sprang from his box. Jud gave orders. "You two go to the fence. I'll stay off in the shadows."

All three moved out and their footsteps died away.

Breck rose to his knees. Urgency of action drove the stiffness from him. Swift reasoning shot through his mind. He had to get out; those packs were his! If the Tillsons looked further they might find his horse. This loft was a poor place now.

He was certain the men had gone some distance beyond the cabin, at least as far as the corral. Leaning from the loft's edge, he looked down into a black, silent room. He swung over, clung to a beam, dropped noiselessly. Nothing showed beyond the door as he took a step, gun poised, every sense alert for sound or sight. He had reached the case, with one foot on the ground outside, when a gray shape sprang with white fangs opened at his throat.

As he met the body with his gun muzzle buried in the long fur, he remembered Tillson's wolf-like dog. His gun crashed and the open mouth closed weakly. Before he could move again a man's bulk blocked the way.

Breck covered it, keeping himself in the dark. "Stop there!"

"No need for that, stranger," came Jud's voice. "You, Art and Hep," he called over his shoulder, "stow away your guns and come here."

A movement sounded outside.

"Keep your hands up!" Breck warned them. He watched the oblong of dim light that marked the doorway.

Three forms appeared. He stood back against the end wall. "One of you uncover that stove."

It was Jud who obeyed, and then spoke first. "Howdy, Ranger?"

Breck nodded, surveying the man for any sign of what the next move might be. Yet if Jud suspected he had been in the cabin for some time, he hid it.

Art and Hep squatted on their heels and held empty hands to the fire.

Breck felt the need of opening matters at once.

"Too bad I killed your dog," he began, indicating the gray shape stretched on the floor. "He charged from around the corner as I came in."

Jud kicked the carcass to one side. "Ain't going to be any trouble about that. Suppose we talk things over while we're all waiting rain no longer beat upon the cabin.

"I suppose you figure to head in with the cattle drive and take count at Rock House?" Jud observed.

"That's about it."

"Then your quickest way would be south from here, meetin' the bunch at Long Canyon."

No doubt there was a double purpose in this directing, steering him out of Sulphur; but Breck knew he would have no immediate trouble. Jud had given him a week.

"Get out of here, boys," Jud ordered. "We've got to be on the summit when they come over. So long, Ranger, see you at the count."

He strode off without a look backward.

Art followed, arrogant disdain on his young face as he passed. Only Hep shot a sidelong glance; furtive, evil-eyed, his puffed mouth drawn down sneeringly. Breck watched him beyond the door, tense with a feeling that had grown strong and certain through the night. Hep had killed Jim Cotter!

He had no more proof than his own reading of treachery in the man, and the retort Art had hurled at him; yet he was convinced. His thoughts mulled on it as he returned to the stove, stripped off khaki shirt and breeches and hung them up to

That was according to Jud's order last night. Breck turned in his saddle. What had become of the other two?

Ten o'clock brought him to the blazed Rock House trail, and a little before noon he topped a ridge that flanked Long Canyon. What he saw then gripped him with swift wonder. Thousands of cattle had come over the eastern summit and were pouring down the canyon in a red, bellowing stream.

Cowhands, looking like black specks from this distance, darted along the line, pushing back bunches that broke from the main flow. Dogs raced in with them. The animals moved on endlessly, slowly heading down until Long Canyon could spew them into the bowl of Rock House Meadow. There they would be held over night. In the morning Breck's job of allotment would begin.

He could see no real chance for trouble. A book in his pocket told the exact number of cattle on each man's permit. Cook's instructions had been: "Allow twenty over your count—you might make that much of a mistake—but no more." To which he had added a word of warning: "Go out on patrol the night the drive reaches Rock House. Someone usually tries to push a few bunches ahead of the release day."

When all the animals had come over the summit, the stream was a mile long and a quarter wide, entirely filling the grass bottom of Long Canyon. Breck rode down to fall in behind the drive, coming into the roar and bellow, above which the cowboys' "Hoosh! Hoosh!" burst constantly.

Some of the hands were Piute Indians from the desert, short dark fellows on paint horses. They nodded to Breck's greeting. Cattlemen shouted "Howdy!" as they flashed by in their ceaseless charging against rear animals.

It was in one of these rushes that he saw Art Tillson astride a chestnut horse. Then came a roll of dust and he could see no more than the rise and fall of red backs, white horns, lashing tails. Behind him his packs snorted out the thick air. He followed the example of other men and hung a bandana over his nose.

The drive flowed on. At times the punchers dropped out to talk and drink at the creek; then dogs alone kept the line moving. Some of the cowhands came around Breck, sizing him up, but for the most part they were aloof and he knew that any friendship must start from himself.

One in particular swung often within a certain distance, remained there for a moment, then darted off, riding a tall blue horse with more than the usual cowboy's abandon. Finally this figure approached closer in the dust and he realized it was not a man.

He turned his mount that way. Louise Temple lowered the handkerchief from her face. "Hello there, Ranger!"

"We meet again," Breck laughed. He held out his hand to her.

She grasped it across the space between their saddles. "You're surprised?" she asked, adding, "So am I. You didn't tell me you belonged up here."

They rode together for a time, and he made conversation in order to keep her near. He wanted to watch her. She was prettier than he had thought at the dance that night; at least more picturesque. She wore a roll-brim Stetson of deep brown. It went well with her tanned skin and dark eyes. A man's shirt of white silk lay open against her firm slender throat, and was drawn down tightly over her breast to be tucked into blue denim jeans. Her cowboy boots were black with short spurs jingling at the heels.

'Progress' Cited in London by Changing Names of Many Streets, Lanes, Alleys

Expatriated Londoners will be sadly confused should they return again to the metropolis. In many ways which appear almost as vandalism the grand old city has been yielding to "progress," says the Toronto Globe and Mail. Haunts familiar to citizens of a century, or even a generation, ago gradually are disappearing; and now it is announced that town planning—inevitable associate of improvement and expansion—has resulted during the last three years in the changing of 1,867 street, lane and alley names. Little respect has been paid to the sentimental objections of the denizens. One argument for these changes is the confusion for postal and fire brigade services created by 20 High streets, 67 Church streets, nine Lovers' lanes and so on.

With characteristic English thoroughness residents are provided with several methods of objecting to these changes. First they are notified by a subcommittee of the general town planning committee, and may protest in writing or by petition. They may also enlist the aid of their borough council, which has the right to protest. But town planning committees are not swayed by sentiment, and most of the name changes go through.

It is, of course, inevitable that there be such changes in a great city, the growth of centuries, which gradually has absorbed district after district with similar street names. The chief difficulty of the town planning committee is reported to be the finding of suitable new names for so many hundred streets, lanes and alleys bearing titles that have come down through the years, and which all have something of a personal interest for those whose lives have been spent in the neighborhood.

Electric Foot-Rule

We can measure weight by the ton or by the grain or dram. We can measure distance by light years or inches. We use the unit most convenient for the objective at hand. But at present we use only one commercial measure for electricity—the kilowatt-hour, which is 1,000 watt-hours.

Patterns SEWING CIRCLE

No. 1655—This is a particularly youthful design in women's sizes—nice for afternoon parties and general wear, too. The bodice has gathers, to give you a nice bustline. The lifted waistline is slenderizing. This dress will be pretty in flat crepe, silk print or thin wool.

No. 1681—Here is a practical house dress that you will enjoy having in wool or flat crepe, too. It has nice princess lines, and the scalloped closing, cut over at the side, gives a generous lap so that you need no fastening on the skirt. For home wear, make this of linen, gingham, percale or calico.

The Patterns.

No. 1655 is designed for sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48. Size 36 requires 4 1/4 yards of 39-inch material.

No. 1681 is designed for sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48. Size 36 requires 4 3/4 yards of 35-inch material, plus 1/2 yard of contrasting material and 2 1/2 yards of edging.

SAFETY TALKS

Most Hazardous Occupation

MOST farmers probably would scorn the use of industry's steel-toed safety shoes, hard hats to protect their heads from falling objects, and goggles with unbreakable lenses to ward off sparks from the grindstone and splinters from the wood-cutting power saw. If this be true, it may possibly account for agriculture ranking first as the most hazardous of occupational enterprises.

The National Safety council reports that of 19,500 fatalities in occupational accidents during 1937, agriculture, or farm accidents, contributed 4,500. Trade and service industries were responsible for another 4,500 accidental deaths. All other industries experienced fewer accident fatalities during that year, the council said.

Machinery and animals were the cause of most fatal farm accidents, machinery figuring in 29 per cent and animals in 21 per cent. In order, other farm hazards and the per cent of fatalities they caused were: Excessive heat, 11 per cent; falls, 9 per cent; vehicular, 8 per cent; lightning, 5 per cent; crushed by falling tree, 4 per cent; all others, 13 per cent.

Throat Accompanying Colds

The simple way pictured above often brings amazingly fast relief from discomfort and sore throat accompanying colds.

Try it. Then—see your doctor. He probably will tell you to continue with the Bayer Aspirin because it acts so fast to relieve discomforts of a cold. And to reduce fever.

This simple way, backed by scientific authority, has largely supplanted the use of strong medicines in easing cold symptoms. Perhaps the easiest, most effective way yet discovered. But make sure you get BAYER Aspirin.

That Nagging Backache

May Warn of Disordered Kidney Action

Modern life with its hurry and worry, irregular habits, improper eating and drinking—its risk of exposure and infection—throws heavy strain on the work of the kidneys. They are apt to become over-taxed and fail to filter excess acid and other impurities from the life-giving blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, headache, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling—feet constantly tired, nervous, all worn out. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder may be burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

Use Doan's Pills. Doan's help the kidneys to get rid of excess poisonous body waste. They are antiseptic to the urinary tract and tend to relieve irritation and the pain it causes. Many grateful people recommend Doan's. They have had more than forty years of public approval. Ask your neighbor!

News From

Springfield

By Bernice T. Van der Vries
Representative, General Assembly
7th Senatorial District.

When the Branson Resolution calling for a sweeping investigation of all of the departments of state government passed the House on Tuesday morning by a vote of 73 ayes and 72 nays, probably the most surprised person in the House was Representative Branson, himself.

After sending out telegrams over the week-end to all the Republican members, it had been decided by Floor Leader Branson that the roll call for attendance should be the test as to whether there were sufficient Republican members present to proceed with the consideration of the resolution. As the roll call proceeded it seemed evident that the House was about evenly divided so far as political faiths were concerned, with possibly the Democrats having the slight edge. For some unexplainable reasons more Republicans seemed to have been laid low by the "flu" than Democrats. Floor Leader Branson, therefore, decided to hold over until the next week the consideration of the resolution, but minority Floor Leader Adamowski had counted noses, too, and being thoroughly familiar with the rules of the House through his long experience as majority floor leader, pressed the point that the resolution was unfinished business and must be considered immediately.

Chair Is Overruled

The chair, under the direction of acting Speaker Representative Renick ruled otherwise. On a motion by Mr. Adamowski, followed by a roll call on the question of sustaining the chair in its decision, the chair was overruled. Long-time members, such as Representatives Schnackenberg, Sparks, Bruer and Searle said that this was the first time in their experience that the chair had not been sustained in a decision of parliamentary procedure.

Of course, after this defeat to Mr. Brandon's plans it was necessary for the resolution to have immediate consideration. Three hours of oratory from both sides of the House followed. Question: Are votes ever changed by speeches?

Avoids Ambulance Ride
When the roll call began there were numerous explanations of votes by those who had not spoken either for or against the resolution in the beginning. Toward the end of the roll call the House chamber was as silent as a tomb. In the meantime, Speaker Cross, at home in Jerseyville ill with influenza, was on the telephone insisting that if the vote was a tie as there was a feeling among the members that it might be, that he would have an ambulance drive him 75 miles to Springfield to cast his vote. He urged that the roll call be delayed until the results were fairly certain. It was a dramatic moment when the tie was broken by the vote of a Democratic member from Freeport, Representative C. D. Franz, the vote otherwise being a stray party vote.

Representative Franz has long been known for his independence and it was rumored that because of his independence efforts were made by some leaders of his own party to defeat him in the last election.

Large Assignment
A large assignment is ahead of the committee of seven which has been selected from both sides of the House to carry on the investigation, although the feeling is general that most of the investigation will be centered in those departments of the state government where accusations of irregularities were made by Democratic factions in the primary election and the general election last year.

Investigations are popular at the present time in the Legislature and resolutions have been introduced providing for investigations of the milk industry, the St. Charles School for Boys and the Relief Administration.

Election Law Vote Delayed

Representative Sprague's election bill (H. B. No. 38) which passed the House several weeks ago, suffered an unusual setback in the Senate just as it was called for passage last Tuesday. A short circuit blew out all the lights in the State House just as the roll call again on his bill. Consideration was postponed because the clerk could not read the names, with the result that there were not enough members present on Wednesday for the two-thirds vote required on the bill which has an emergency clause. Undoubtedly the bill will be passed next week as it is non-controversial.

The influenza epidemic seriously interfered with the business of the General Assembly. Probably very little business will be transacted until after the Chicago Primary election, as there will be only a short session next week and no sessions at all the week following that.

Nat'l Boat Show Opens Sunday At Navy Pier

The call of the great outdoors will beckon to every sportsman in the Midwest on Sunday, February 26, when the gates to Navy Pier open for eight activity-packed days on the tenth anniversary edition of the Chicago National Boat and Sports Show. With every bit of space on the half-mile long Navy Pier devoted to boating, yachting, fishing, camping, hunting, and outdoor displays; exhibitions from state departments of conservation and tourist and resort bureaus; and many contests in outdoor sports, the promise of the biggest boat and sports show in Midwest history was assured by Commodore Hubbard H. Erickson, general manager of the event.

All the boat and yacht clubs in the Great Lakes have been invited to participate in the show and one feature of their activity will be the selection of the "Lady of the Lakes." Each club is entering one or more contestants in this event. The winner will be named by a jury of selection composed of widely-known yachtsmen and will be awarded an all-expense trip to the International Star Boat Races on Lake Pontchartrain at New Orleans this March.

Anglers will have their innings in a fishermen's tall story contest. The teller of the tallest tale will receive an appropriate prize. Hunters and woodsmen, too, will have a chance to unfetter their imaginations in a Paul Bunyan story contest.

The latest in pleasure craft of all types from kayaks to cruisers will be displayed in great variety. Flagship of the show will be "Hypo," the forty-six foot cruiser that came from Manitowoc, Wis., to Navy Pier under her own power through perilous wintry waters. The "Hypo" was the first pleasure craft to sail the Great Lakes this year.

Sportsmen's competitions on the Pier will include bait and fly casting, table tennis, golf driving, and rifle and pistol marksmanship.

Special days have been set aside for the show as follows: Sunday (February 26), Illinois Day; Monday (February 27), Wisconsin Day; Tuesday, Michigan

Day; Wednesday, Minnesota Day; Thursday, Fishermen's Day; Friday, Aviation Day; Saturday, Chicago Day; Sunday, Yachtsmen's Day.
Hours for the show will be from 1 p.m. to 11 p.m. each day.

Joliet Production Credit Association Annual Meeting

During the past year the Joliet Production Credit Association made 501 loans to farmers in Grundy, Will, Kendall and Kankakee counties, amounting to $463,985.00, it was revealed in the report to the stockholders at the annual meeting of the association at Joliet, February 9th, says Ward L. Edwards, secretary-treasurer.

"None of these loans were made as an emergency measure," Mr. Edwards said, "but all of them were made to established farmers with good security, to finance practical and sound farm operations." An applicant must show that the money will be used for a constructive purpose and that it can be repaid or the loan is not made, he explained.

Mr. John H. Cryder of Plainfield, and Mr. Orrin B. Kennedy of Bristol, were elected directors for terms of three years. Both are established farmers and are familiar with agricultural conditions in this section.

The meeting was presided over by Ralph O. Mather, President, and Ward L. Edwards, secretary-treasurer, presented the report to the stockholders. About 325 people were present, of whom 137 were members.

"Class B stock owned by the members, which determines the progress toward local ownership, increased in 1938 over 1937 by about 3, per cent," Mr. Edwards said. The members were told about the operation the past year and that the reserve which protects the investment that members make in Class B stock, has increased by about $685.00.

Among the visitors present was Mr. H. W. Leigh, chief accountant of the Production Credit Corporation of St. Louis who spoke on "Special Credit Needs of Agriculture."

WILL COUNTY FARMER GETS RECORD PRICE FOR HOGS

High prices were realized on a drove of heavy butcher hogs marketed at the Chicago Stock Yards at midweek by Dave Gilmore, of Will county.

The consignment included 32 head of cross-bred Poland China-Duroc Jerseys, raised on his farm near Plainfield. They averaged 284 pounds per head and sold at $7.90 per cwt., the highest price reported for these weights on the day they were here. He also received $6.50 per cwt. for a purebred Poland China stag weighing 650 pounds, top price for stags that heavy.

Both cattle and hog prices reached new highs for the year in this week's trading at Chicago. The midweek cattle top of $13.75 per cwt. is the highest point at which cattle have sold in the past 14 months, and the Thursday hog top, $8.30, is the peak since October 10.

Unemployment Compensation

Fourth in a Series of Five Weekly Articles on What Unemployment Compensation Means to Illinois Workers

Under the Illinois Unemployment Compensation Act almost 2,000,000 workers will be entitled to receive weekly benefits of approximately half of their full-time weekly pay if they are unemployed after July 1, 1939.

Both the amount and duration of these benefits will be determined on the basis of quarterly wage records sent in by contributing employers for their employees. These records have been kept by the Division of Unemployment Compensation's office in Chicago since January 1, 1938. All workers should have a wage record by days, weeks, or months, which they can use as a check on records submitted to the Division.

For all those who apply for benefits during July, August and September of 1939, the period between January 1, 1938 and March 31, 1939 will be known as the "Base Period." This period consists of five calendar quarters.

The weekly benefit amount is determined as follows:

First, find the quarter in the base period in which the total earned wages were highest (but do not count more than the first $390.00). Suppose this sum is $260. Divide the total by thirteen (the number of weeks per quarter), and you have the full-time weekly wage. In this case it would be $20. The weekly benefit amount will be one-half of this, or $10.

The duration of benefits, or the number of weeks benefits will be paid, depends upon this base period wage record also. The total benefit allowed will be either one-sixth of the base period wage credits (not to exceed $390 per quarter), or 16 times the weekly benefit amount, whichever is the lesser.

Using the example cited above, and assuming that the earnings each quarter were $260, this would be a total of 1300 in wage credits earned during the five-quarter base period. This worker would be entitled to draw only this amount at the rate of $10 per week, or for 16 weeks.

But suppose the total wages earned during the base period were only $600. In this case the worker could draw only one-sixth of this amount, or $100. That is, he could draw $10 a week for only ten weeks.

In no case will benefits be paid for more than 16 weeks. That is the maximum and in no case will the weekly benefit amount be more than $15. This means the total amount any worker may draw in any benefit year will be 16 times $15, or $240. That is the absolute maximum, and to draw this amount he must have earned at least six times that amount during his base period.

Another point to remember is that the base period will eventually consist of eight quarters. After October 1, 1939, the base period will consist of six quarters. After January 1, 1940, the base period will consist of seven quarters. After April 1, 1940, the base period will always consist of the first eight of the last nine completed calendar quarters.

Workers who are partially employed, that is, working less than full time and receiving less than 60 per cent of their average weekly wages, may qualify for partial benefits. The exact amount of such partial benefits will depend upon actual earnings and their relationship to the full time weekly benefit amount.

No benefits will be paid until a worker has waited three weeks. That is, he must have been employed for three weeks before he receives benefits. This means that those who apply immediately after July 1, 1939, will have to wait three weeks before receiving benefit checks, in the event their claims are approved.

GOLD

A SHORT WESTERN YARN

By Zeb Potter

Sam Hodges stretched his lanky legs before him and leaned his back against the shack. His honest blue eyes thoughtfully studied the star-embazoned Colorado sky. Tomorrow Hodges would be on his way to Rio-lite with his burro to dump the precious burden of gold on the counter of the assayer's office.

Visions of his mother back home in Detroit leaped before his eyes. He could buy her the home and the medical attention she needed for the lung trouble.

Sam's cigarette burned out. Leisurely he leaned forward to scratch a match on the heel of a worn boot. He stood up. The lighted match was in his hand.

"Stick 'em up pardner," Sam turned. The glow of the match revealed to him the hawkish features of a short man leveling a six shooter at his mid-riff.

The match fell from Sam's hands which slowly went skyward. "What do you want?" Sam's long arms slowly lowered toward his waist line. "Keep those mits up, or I'll drill you." Swiftly the squat gunman stepped behind Sam and emptied his gun belt of the six shooter. "Now get in there. Lay down on your belly with your hands behind your back."

Grudgingly Sam was pushed into his cabin at the point of the gun. His keen blue eyes noted the heavy canvass sacks of gold still laying on the rough pine table beside a can of beans.

"Lay down."

Sam slowly slid to the floor. Turning his head slightly, he saw the dwarf bending over a coil of rope in the corner of the cabin. Swiftly Sam raised to his knees. The robber's six shooter blazed. A slug creased Sam's scalp.

"Another move like that, and you'll be going to boot-hill cemetery."

When Sam's hands were tied behind his back, cruel lights blazed in the stranger's eyes. A can of blasting powder stood on the table beside the gold sacks. The man grunted as he bent over Sam. The seared brain of the young miner riddled with the thought, "Will he do that?"

Quietly the marauder stepped to the table and patted the gold sacks. His glance turned from the sacks to the can of blasting powder. Sam watched him. He knew that he was in a "heck of a fix," that this man would not stop at anything.

The robber peered out the doorway into the night. The moon lighted a clump of dried spruce brush near the tethered burro munching hay.

Quickly, with short jerky motions, the man strode from the cabin to the brush pile. Sam watched him. His seared brain geared into action.

He raised his head from his prone position on the floor. He whistled. It was a low soft whistle. The burro pricked his ears. The animal turned its head in the direction of the cabin. The man was stooping over the pile gathering fagots. Wood to start a funeral pyre for the bound young miner, in the cabin. The powder when it exploded, would blow to atoms Sam and all remaining evidence of this dastardly deed.

Sam whistled again. The man was about to straighten up with a load of brush in his arms. The animal reared on its haunches and kicked savagely. The impact of the hoofs sent the robber hurtling into the deep canyon below. Sam then loosened his thumbs on the jagged edge of a rock.

Rock Island to Order Two New Streamliners

The Rock Island Lines has requested bids for the construction of two 7-car streamline, lightweight trains for their Colorado service, in an advertisement that recently appeared in newspapers. Bids are resubmitted by March 1.

Each train will consist of a baggage car, two coaches, a dining car, two sleeping cars and a room-observation-lounge car.

The trains will be powered by 2000 horse power Diesel locomotives, according to the railroad's plan, and when placed in operation will provide deluxe service between Chicago and Denver and Colorado Springs on a schedule considerably faster than the present schedule of the Rocky Mountain Limited. Operating through the Tri-Cities area—Moline & Rock Island, Illinois; and Davenport and Des Moines, Ia., and Omaha and Lincoln Nebr., the trains will provide faster Rock Island service to Omaha and other Nebraska and Colorado points, and will supplement the present high-speed Rocket service between Chicago and Des Moines thru the Tri-Cities.

With the acquisition of these two trains the Rock Island will have in service a total of eight streamline, Diesel-powered, high speed trains, including the six Rockets which were placed in operation during the latter part of 1937 and which have been popular and profitable. The present Rockets, however, are daylight trains and carry no sleeping accommodations.

MOKENA

The Mokena Garden club held its last meeting in the home of Mrs. Geo. Rinke with 22 members being present. All enjoyed the afternoon immensely. After the meeting each member showed an article which they had made of materials which are found in practically every home and which are often discarded because of the material is often considered worthless. Everyone learned a lesson from the variety of articles exhibited, and went home with new and valuable ideas.

We wish to take this opportunity to express our thanks and appreciation to all the citizens of Mokena who so willingly contributed toward our fund in order that we may keep up our work in beautifying our village.

The next meeting of the Garden Club will be held in the home of Mrs. Arthur Schoop and every member is requested to either exhibit, or talk about her hobby, if she has one.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

Reviewed by CARTER FIELD

Mr. Field gives a vivid picture of how the various issues between congress and the White House appear to him . . . Electric industry on the spot to prove or disprove the charge that its delayed spending has been important factor in holding back prosperity.

WASHINGTON.—Sentiment on a number of issues between the White House and congress is crystallizing. The lines are not based on the relief appropriation battle. Some of the President's supporters on that will desert him on other fights, and vice versa. Sometimes he will have a majority. Sometimes a minority. The big point of the relief fight was not the amount of money, it was loss of face and prestige by the President. It ended the six years of utter confidence in his direction and faith in his administration so far as spending is concerned.

Here is the way the issues look now:

Devaluation—The President will win. Congress will continue his present power to cut the gold value of the dollar down to 50 per cent of its pre-Roosevelt status. Silver state senators swing the balance here in combination with the loyal bloc. The price of their votes will be extension of subsidy for domestic silver.

Neutrality—Congress will not interfere with the sale of planes to France. It is impressed with necessity of strengthening France and Britain as surest means of preventing war. But sentiment is also strong against increasing amount of discretion to the President in enforcing the neutrality law. The belief is vigorous that changes of rules after war starts means overt acts, hence endangers dragging U. S. in. Congressional sentiment is not quite "peace at any price" but almost.

Wagner Act—Congress is set on modifying act along lines of A. F. of L. amendments introduced by Senator Walsh. President would like to dictate changes but will probably accept inevitable to avoid further loss of prestige.

Congress Is Opposed to President's Tax Ideas

Taxes—Congressional sentiment is so strong against Roosevelt's wish to restore original tax on undistributed corporation earnings and capital gains taxes that he may abandon fight. The President must ask for more revenue. Congress is definitely set on boosting rates on incomes from $10,000 to $50,000, just as definitely against boosting higher levies—because of law of diminishing returns—and doubtful about reducing exemptions. The President will have plenty of chance to study the situation before making any recommendations.

Social Security—Congress will not go as hogwild on old age payments as campaign pledges of successful candidates might indicate. It will boost them, advance date on which they go into effect. It will not reduce payroll taxes, but may force the treasury to contribute to the kitty. The President will oppose the last vigorously.

Government Reorganization—The President will not get the power he really wants to revamp government agencies and departments. Congress will not consent to turning I. C. C., civil service commission, etc., into mere administration underlings. Senator Byrd will continue to annoy the administration considerably by insisting on real economy.

Relief—Senate votes cutting politics out of federal payrolls, though partially nullified by the house, point the way to more trouble for the New Deal in reorganization of the WPA set-up and control of the appropriation for relief in the fiscal year beginning July 1, next.

Electric Industry on Spot As to Delaying Prosperity

The electric industry will shortly give a demonstration of the truth or falsity of the often made charge that its delayed spending has been one of the most important factors in holding back prosperity. Actually, of course, investors in the electric industry may wait a little, to see if the logical steps which might be expected to follow the purchase of the Tennessee Electric properties by TVA are followed up. For example, to see if there will be some assurance that the government will not extend its competition to new areas, and to see if the government will treat fairly other units it buys to avoid duplication and to avoid competition between public and private operation.

But no such problem confronts the public. It can take it for granted that peace is coming, and will spread. The investor might wait to be sure that the Tennessee deal is not just a trap for him. But to the outsider it is unthinkable that the administration would have gone so far as it did in the Tennessee Electric deal with Wendell L. Willkie if it did not intend to go further, and do whatever was necessary to encourage utility spending. The point is that if one assumes that the hate which has characterized the administration's treatment of the electric industry previously is still in effect, there would have been no earthly reason for paying the Commonwealth and Southern so much. For the plain fact is that TVA did not have to pay anything like so much. It could have acquired the properties eventually at second hand junk value, the course so consistently advocated by TVA's chief backer in the house of representatives, John Rankin of Mississippi.

The Supreme court had just thrown out the main legal hope of the privately owned utilities. True, the high court has never held the TVA's venture into the electric business to be constitutional. But it is also true that the utilities would have been at their wits' end to find some other method of getting the court to pass on this question. When a majority of the high court held that the privately owned utilities could not claim damages because none of their franchises guaranteed them against competition, the door was rather effectually closed.

Sudden Change of Policy Ordered From White House

TVA could have pressed on, with its strangling competition, with rates which did not return a yield even on the part of its cost which was not allocated to flood control or navigation and free PWA grants on the local systems.

The answer is that there was a sudden change of policy, ordered from the White House. There was a right-about face of the course which David E. Lillenthal had been pursuing. There was an utter rejection of the policies of George Norris and John Rankin so far as treatment of the electric industry is concerned.

The only rational explanation is that the administration wants something more important, and that something is not difficult to see. As a matter of fact W. E. Douglas, chairman of the S. E. C., has been telling the President for a long time—more than a year now—that the utilities have been lagging at the rate of about a billion dollars a year in their new spending. It would seem apparent that the President has decided to see if utility spending, dammed up for four years now according to Douglas' calculations, will not break the business log-jam and revive prosperity in this country.

If it works, as some friends of the President see the future, business will boom from now until November, 1940; the New Deal will go marching on for the four years to follow. If business continues bad for the next 18 months, a reactionary government may sit in Washington.

Congress Goes Along With President on Preparedness

In actual appropriations for ship, and guns, munitions and planes, and training for preparedness generally President Roosevelt will get all he wants from congress. Capitol Hill is much impressed with the notion that the surest way to preserve peace is to be so strong that it would be folly for any foreign country to drag us into war.

But congress does not see eye to eye with the President on some of the purposes of increased national defense spending. It will not go along with him toward possible sanctions against aggressor nations. There is tremendous sentiment for minding our own business and not giving even too much tongue-lashing to the nations that are doing things of which we cordially disapprove.

There is a strong minority, headed by Key Pittman, chairman of the senate foreign relations committee, which is for strong economic action against Japan. Senator Pittman is convinced that this country could punish Japan for its action in closing the door of Chinese trade to this country, and could do so without risk of provoking a war between Japan and the United States.

There is another strong minority which favors boycotting of Germany, partly because of Germany's treatment of the Jews, and partly because of her aggressions on Austria, Czechoslovakia, and her keeping Europe constantly in a war scare. A much smaller minority feels the same way toward Italy.

Japan Cuts Purchases of Cotton From United States

In the cotton growing states there is still deadly fear that if the United States should boycott Japan's silk, the price of cotton would drop out of sight. As a matter of fact, Japan has been cutting her purchases of cotton from the United States and increasing her purchases of this staple from Brazil and China. But the fear is still there.

The great majority in congress still has the slogan "Keep out of Entangling Alliances," and is also vigorously against any overt word or act which might force Germany, Japan, or any other nation to pick up Uncle Sam's gauntlet. Part of this is honest reasoning on the part of the senators and representatives themselves. Part of it, perhaps most of it, is from emphatic protests from the folks back home.

Instead of the reaction the White House expected from the emphasis on the necessity of protecting democracy so that religion would be safe, there is a tremendous fear, judging by the mail pouring in on Capitol Hill, that the President may, by taking such a militant attitude, involve this country in some European quarrel.

Practical

By SMITH STEVENS

© Associated Newspapers.
WNU Service.

IT HAD taken exactly 18 years to make Katherine Arnold practical. That is to say, it had taken those teeny years to make her realize to an uncanny extent, it seemed to her pretty city aunt, Agnes Raymond, that life was extremely serious and mainly unpleasant. This same aunt was determined that now her exacting grandparents had died she should learn to be impractical.

The two were sitting one summer evening on the old farm porch. The air was mellow with a surge of rain-drenched geranium and roses and the scene as peaceful as the heart of Katherine was not.

"I'm just wondering," began Agnes, "if you've ever believed in fairies. I rather doubt it. Have you?"

The words were spoken so thoughtfully yet carelessly that Katherine felt a sudden fear for her charming relative's sanity. "I certainly have not," she said sullenly. Then, perceiving that her reply was scarcely gracious, she added, "Grandmother forbade fairy books. We did read some in school, though."

"You know, dear, to me that's horrible. You 'did' fairy-tales! You poor youngster; instead of living them! And in this paradise, for this country is lovely. It reminds me of Sicily."

The ranch was situated in Marin County, California, that home of exquisite wild flowers.

"You couldn't, I suppose, try—just to please me—to believe in them now? You see, I do believe in fairies—that is, in all lovely spirits dwelling in flowers and trees and sunsets and books and theaters—yes, dear, I know grandmother thought theaters were wicked, but they're not! And in music—oh, yes, there are fairies in music perhaps most of all. I want you to know and enjoy all these things, because until you do you just haven't really lived at all."

And so Katherine was taken to be outfitted in San Francisco. The girl inherited all her grandparents' savings. She wasn't poor—"but, oh, so poor in joyful experience," thought her aunt.

Katherine was passive. She allowed her hair to be bobbed and conceded it made her look less solemn. She submitted to soft and silken underwear. She admired the attractive frocks and hats that now were hers. But at one thing she rebelled. She would not be "nice" to the well-meaning young men her conscientious aunt provided as playmates.

"I do not intend to marry, Aunt Agnes," she declared, watching the seals ambling over the rocks from the Cliff house, "I have a little money and I am quite convinced I should be happier single."

"You are quite the funniest little girl I've ever met," said Agnes, "for you talk like a book about—oh! maybe 1860. You are far too quiet ever to succeed as a bachelor girl; old maids are extinct; it's just that you don't like the way Harry's hair grows and the way Ambrose eats spaghetti—well, I don't myself."

Katherine had to smile. "I confess you're right, Aunt," she said. "But I can't imagine how it is you know."

"I chose a husband myself—once," her eyes clouded, for the adored husband lost his life in the beginning of the great war, "but Katherine, you really do rather like Jim Jackson, now don't you?"

"Yes I do," Katherine was always frank. "And if you won't think me crazy I'll tell you why. He hates the country."

"My dear!" Her aunt paused. Then very softly, "Was it as bad as that?"

"It was horrible. If you really think that Jim will never, never want to go away even in the summer, or if he must, will fish alone, I'll have him. He is rather dear in lots of ways, but I won't ever milk a cow or listen to a squeaky radio or hold conversations over the telephone with neighbors 'listening in' again as long as I live. Aunt, Jim asked me to marry him last night. I was afraid. I don't know city life although I think I love it. I've never worn a dress that grandmother didn't choose. Last night is the first time I've ever been to a theater. Until Jim told me what it was I didn't know the meaning of a symphony concert. I knew nothing but cows and calves and harvesting fruit and, oh, you have no idea how dreadful it was! Grandmother believed in mortifying the flesh and made me eat coconut cake. I asked Jim if he liked it and he said he'd have a luxury tax on coconuts if he could. And he hates coco, too."

"This is very, very nice," said Agnes, forbearing to laugh, "Jim's quite a dear boy, and I know all his people well. He loathes the country—the kind of aspect of it that you know, you poor, poor child! As much as you do. And he once threw a coconut cake out of the window when he was about nine years old."

"How heavenly!" Katherine flew to the telephone and called Jim's number. Her aunt withdrew. "She's growing young, thank goodness," she said to herself. "I couldn't have stood her elderly ways much longer."

This is very, very nice," said Agnes, forbearing to laugh, "Jim's quite a dear boy, and I know all his people well. He loathes the country—the kind of aspect of it that you know, you poor, poor child! As much as you do. And he once threw a coconut cake out of the window when he was about nine years old."

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

Lesson for February 26

PETER IN SAMARIA

LESSON TEXT—Acts 8:14-25.
GOLDEN TEXT—Come ye, buy, and eat; yea, come, buy wine and milk without money and without price.—Isaiah 55:1.

Commercialism certainly should have no place in the Christian Church. But in an age that will even commercialize a man's love for his mother, it is small wonder that the great holy days of the Church—Christmas and Easter—have become the special object of profit-seeking purveyors of everything from hats to whisky. New Year's day, Thanksgiving day, Mother's day, Father's day, any day at all, becomes just another opportunity to take a man's money, waste his time, and possibly to destroy his soul. It is high time that intelligent folk make effective protest against such perversion of sacred things.

The Scripture lesson for today tells of one who went so far as to try to buy the power of God for money, that he might use it to get gain for himself, failing to realize that the power of God is a gift and to be used only for His glory.

I. Spiritual Power—the Gift of God (vv. 14-17).

The Holy Spirit who is the third person of the blessed Trinity had called Philip, a layman, and sent him forth to preach in Samaria. Men and women were converted, and when the church at Jerusalem heard of it, they sent Peter and John to give counsel and help to the new converts. Through the laying on of hands these received the gift of the Holy Spirit even as we now receive Him the moment we believe on Christ.

What a glorious truth it is that the believer is indwelt by the Holy Spirit (I Cor. 6:19). Thus even the humblest believer has in Him the One who redeems man, gives grace for holy living, and empowers for service. The greatest power in all the world is consequently available to every true and yielded believer. Gone then are all excuses for weak and careless living. Gone is every ground for claiming that one cannot serve God. The power and grace are His, and He gives them to His followers as a gift. Christian friend, are you giving the Holy Spirit of God liberty to infill and use you as He will?

II. Spiritual Power—Not for Sale (vv. 18-24).

Men who put their trust in money are prone to think that one can buy anything. They say with Walpole, "Every man has his price." But they are wrong. There are men and women in the world who cannot be bought, and it is even more certain that the best things that life can give a man have no price tag on them—a mother's love, friendship, fellowship with God, the Holy Spirit's power—these among many others are not for sale.

Simon, a professed believer, recognized that these followers of Jesus had a great power which he thought to buy for his own business as a magician. His was a very gross and blatant effort to do what many have done in the Church, and are doing today, by under-cover methods. There are those who by holding the purse strings seek to control the message of the preacher, or who use their financial influence to obtain control of church organizations and institutions. Their efforts are doomed to ultimate failure, but the present harm they do to the cause of Christ is appalling. Many a church and pastor would be far better off if they could rise up and say with Peter, "Thy money perish with thee."

III. Spiritual Power—for Testimony (v. 25).

Peter and John set the Samaritan believers a good example by permitting the Spirit of God to use them to testify and preach the Word of the Lord in many villages. The Holy Spirit does "not speak of himself," but guides the believer "in all truth" (John 16:13), and His primary ministry is to glorify Christ (John 16:14). It follows that the outstanding mark of a Spirit-born and Spirit-filled believer is his desire to speak of and to glorify Christ.

Such a testimony will be "not in words which man's wisdom teacheth, but which the Holy Ghost teacheth" (I Cor. 2:13), and will bear fruit for eternity.

A Common Adversary
Much contempt and hatred towards erring humanity would be averted—and instead compassion would be excited—if we kept constantly in mind the humbling thought that we have the same common adversary! Indeed, such realization would elicit prayer in lieu of caustic criticism.

The Word Chance

By the word chance we merely express our ignorance of the cause of any fact or effect—not that we think that chance was itself the cause.—Henry Ferguson.

What to Eat and Why

C. Houston Goudiss Helps to Answer the Question:
What to Eat During Lent?

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

A CLERGYMAN friend of mine once remarked that in his opinion, Lent lasts far too long. He had reference, I believe, to the fact that in a swift-moving age, people might be more apt to keep Lent faithfully, if it terminated in a shorter period than 40 days.

Many homemakers, I feel sure, would echo his sentiments, but for a rather different reason! Numbers of them, I know, find the six weeks of Lent the most troublesome of the entire year. Their difficulty lies in planning meatless meals that satisfy hearty appetites. And since the weather is often bitterly cold in late February and early March, families usually seem hungrier, and harder to satisfy, than at almost any other season.

A Chance for Variety

Lent does challenge the homemaker to exercise imagination and ingenuity. But it also provides a golden opportunity to get out of a menu rut, if you happen to be one of those people who follow a set formula most of the year. It may, likewise, offer a chance to make some significant savings in your food budget.

Most of us feel that meat makes the meal. And it cannot be denied that its savory extractives give it a most appetizing and intriguing flavor. But there are a number of other foods which contain proteins of equal biological value. Furthermore, nutritionists hold that it is desirable to obtain protein from a number of different sources. That is because different protein foods contain varying amounts of different amino acids; and by eating a variety of protein foods, we can best obtain a wide assortment of these "building stones" of the body.

For Meatless Meals

Fish comes to mind, first of all, as a main dish for the meal that does not include meat. For those who are far from the source of supply of fresh-caught fish, there are the quick-frozen varieties, the dried and salted fish, such as finnan haddie, shredded codfish and block cod, and 27 types of canned fish and shell fish.

Canned salmon is one of the least expensive of all protein foods. And so many things can be said in its favor that one nationally known food authority referred to it as the most nutritious animal food that could be had for children over six. It is a notable source of minerals, especially calcium, phosphorus and iodine, and contains vitamins A, D, and G.

Cheese in Many Forms

Cheese is another splendid source of protein that should be used more freely, not only during Lent but throughout the entire year. It is high in energy values. And in addition, it contains the milk minerals, calcium and phosphorus, and is a good source of vitamin A. Cheese is so flavorful some that it adds zest to any meal at which it is served. And it certainly should interest the homemaker with an eye to thrift. For a little goes a long way. It is, therefore, an ideal food around which to build nourishing, appetizing and economical meals.

Macaroni, Spaghetti and Noodles

Cheese is especially good when combined with such foods as macaroni, spaghetti or egg noodles. It affords a pleasing flavor contrast. And it helps to balance the menu—in two ways. First, the proteins of cheese supplement those found in wheat from which macaroni products are made. Secondly, cheese contains a substantial amount of fat, which teams well with high carbohydrate foods, such as any of those made from the cereal grains. Cheese may also be combined with vegetables, to make another balanced food team. The cheese contributes proteins, energy values, and minerals, while the vegetables are an outstanding source of cellulose or bulk, as well as vitamins and minerals.

Don't Overlook Nuts and Legumes

Legumes are one group of vegetables which are high in energy values. They also contain protein which is suitable for repairing worn-out body tissue. Dried beans, peas and lentils may therefore be used as a main dish at Lenten meals, replacing both meat and potatoes. There are many varieties of ready-cooked beans on the market, packed in both glass and tin. And dried lima beans are particularly well-suited to being made into croquettes, patties, loaves, chowders and ragouts.

Nuts are another possibility for Lenten meals that should be considered by every homemaker. They, too, can be used for croquettes and nut loaves, as well as souffles and casserole combinations. Nuts can be combined with vegetables for a main-course dish . . . with fruit for dessert. In the form of nut butters, they make a nourishing spread for luncheon sandwiches.

Moreover, each type of nut has a distinctive taste, and walnuts, peanuts, brazil nuts and pecans, for example, each make a thoroughly delightful dish, with a flavor quite different from the others.

Most homemakers will also want to use eggs more frequently during Lent, because they are so readily available and easily prepared. This is commendable, because besides being a fine source of protein, eggs rank next to milk as a protective food.

Only a few of the many possibilities for Lent have been suggested in this brief review. But surely they give a hint of the many good and nutritious foods a homemaker can choose on those days when she plans meatless meals.

Japan Plans Russian War; Woo Mongols

Crafty Tokyo Capitalizes on Unity Ambitions Of Asiatics

By JOSEPH W. LABINE

Today's casual traveler in Japan and Manchukuo hears talk of "the war." Strangely "the war" is not that bloody conflict which has been raging in China the past two years.

Instead Japan turns its imperialistic eyes to the north-west, that vast, mysterious expanse of Asia where dwell the Mongol, Turk and Tartar, where Russian atheism mingles with exotic Lamaism and sing-song Chinese chants. Here are slant-eyed, nomadic tribes who for centuries have lived far removed from the influence of either east or west, basking in memory of Ghenghis Kahn.

ghis Kahn, the stalwart Mongolian who captured half the known world seven centuries ago.

Peace could reign in this strange land were it not for two great, stubborn powers which face each other over a vast frontier. Of Russia it can be said there are few new territorial ambitions in Asia because the Soviet is already overburdened with land. But Russia will not relinquish what it has, and Japan definitely seeks to become the No. 1 far eastern power. Big Asia is still not big enough to accommodate two such domineering giants.

Japs Told to Prepare.

The inevitability of this war was brought into clear focus last month when Japanese leaders told their people point-blank to prepare for several more years of hardship; that when the Chinese war was over there would be a new conflict with Russia.

Actually this Russo-Jap war has been in progress since 1932 when Japan marched into Manchukuo and established a puppet regime. It was first brought into the open last summer when Soviet and Japanese troops clashed over possession of Changkufeng hill, a tiny promontory near the meeting place of Korea, Manchukuo and Siberia. In recent weeks it has flared again in western Manchukuo where eight clashes were reported within a few days. Moscow charged the Japanese were attempting to capture the Soviet island "No. 227" in the Argun river; Tokyo charged the Russians had made assaults.

Outside such sporadic conflicts the war thus far has been a mutual attempt to outmaneuver the enemy. Russia's method is to confound Japan by silence. No news leaks through the impenetrable border of Siberia but it is known that the Soviet has vacated civilians for several miles back along the entire Manchukuoan frontier. This border has been completely militarized and woe to the man who tries to cross it. At only one point, the railroad entrance at Manchuli—in northwestern Manchukuo—can passage be made from Russian to Japanese territory.

Japan Woos the Mongols.

Japan's method has been one of crafty penetration. Following her occupation of Peiping in the summer of 1937 she gained control of the rambling Peiping-Suiyuan railroad which winds across Inner Mongolia for 700 miles. Yet it was not until several months ago that the world knew of this penetration. Behind the move is a fascinating story of intrigue, of imperialistic exploitation of the dream that has guided Mongolians since Ghenghis Kahn's day.

All told Asia has about 2,500,000 Mongols, a race whose language, appearance and customs are entirely different from those of China. These people are herdsmen and nomads; Chinese are tradesmen. Sometime after the decline of the Khans, Outer and Inner Mongolia were separated, the first going to Russia and the latter to China. Outer Mongolia has about 400,000 people, Inner has 300,000, and almost 2,000,000 of them live in Japanese Manchukuo.

THE FAR EAST TODAY—Map, showing Japanese, Russian and Chinese status in the Orient, reveals strategic importance of Outer and Inner Mongolia in Japan's campaign to create a "wall" between Siberia from China proper. Tokyo hopes to extend this wall far back into central Asia. Boundary marked with crosses shows probable frontiers in the predicted Russo-Jap war.

As with such European peoples as the Ukrainians, the desire for national unification has clung with Mongolians throughout the ages. Whether this desire still persists in Japanese propagandizing for a united Mongolia is satisfactorily furthering Tokyo's desires. Prince Teh, the sincere puppet ruler who now holds sway over Inner Mongolia, was promised every assistance in bringing Russia's Outer Mongolians into the newly organized "United League of Mongolia." What the Japs failed to tell their new friends is that their primary purpose is to oust Russia, not to help the Mongolians.

Reports from Moscow indicate the Soviet is not unaware of Japan's intentions. One Guendoun, president of the Outer Mongolian People's republic, is now a "guest" of the Russian secret police during an effort to discover who was behind a plot to turn the country over to the Japanese last year.

Until recently Outer Mongolia was one of Asia's greatest mysteries. It had no railroads, no important cities and no highways. But a small inland railroad has now been built and by the end of next summer it will be lengthened to join with the long Trans-Siberian railroad.

Japan Looks Westward.

Foreign military experts think Japan's expansion program is foolhardy until the Chinese war is finished, because the nation is already exhausted financially and weary of fighting. But this does not concern the Japs, who boldly outline their dream of expanding westward from Inner Mongolia into the deep interior of Asia. This would end with conquest of China's newest province, Sinkiang. Here they would run against Tartars, Turks, Mongols and Mohammedans, all strongly influenced by the Soviet. But it would mean throwing up a barrier between Russia and the Chinese, cutting off aid from Siberia.

Today the sharp tongued Japs are rasping along a vast frontier at the Russian bear which lies silent and waiting, occasionally lifting its paw in a tentative slap at the impolite invader. This strange attitude bothers the Japs, who met with fierce opposition on Changkufeng hill last summer but have heard little more since. The probability is that Russia is content to wait until Japan sticks her imperialistic neck out a bit too far. Then the axe may fall, hit or miss.

Expansion of Canal Facilities Asked as Defense Precaution

Gatun locks, at the western end of Panama canal.

WASHINGTON. — Construction of a third set of locks for the Panama canal—instead of an entirely new canal at Nicaragua—is being discussed seriously by the Roosevelt administration and members of the house and senate military affairs committees.

Although the United States signed a treaty with Nicaragua in 1914 under which canal rights were established, the war department points out there would be little economic or military advantage to a second canal. More important, it would cost between $1,000,000,000 and $1,500,000,000, compared with the $200,000,000 expenditure for increasing the Panama canal's capacity.

War department plans in Panama are linked with President Roosevelt's program to increase the zone's military personnel as part of the current rearmament program. The new locks would accommodate the largest ships, all but a few of which are already able to cross the canal. The project would be liquidated by increased earnings, it is estimated. Annual tolls of $14,000,000 would provide for interest payments and a sinking fund to amortize not only the cost of new locks, but also of the $49,000,000 in bonds still outstanding on the original canal.

The chief argument in favor of a new Nicaraguan canal is its military desirability. Proponents claim an attacking enemy might bottle up the entire American fleet in the Panama canal, but this could be avoided by having a second passage.

Opponents maintain the cost would be prohibitive. In addition to the original expense the government would be forced to maintain a military garrison equal to that now or guard at Panama. The route would be considerably longer, requiring from 25 to 30 hours for passage as against eight hours required at Panama.

The new Panama locks would accommodate all expected transportation increases for the next century, giving the canal a capacity to handle five times the traffic now moving across it.

But the possibility at Nicaragua is not being overlooked. An army officer is stationed there constantly to keep plans up-to-date. This route would utilize the huge Lake Nicaragua and follow up plans first started by Portuguese settlers in 1550. One suggestion would make the canal a private venture, but the war department calls attention to difficulties encountered when private enterprise sought to build the Panama canal.

HOW TO SEW

"DEAR MRS. SPEARS: I am a bride of six months and your Book 1—SEWING for the Home Decorator has certainly been a life saver for me. I have turned to it for help when making things for every room in our little house. The guest room is next. I would like to use yellow to brighten it up. What color could be combined with this? My smart effects must be accomplished with spare minutes rather than expensive materials, so I would appreciate a helpful hint along this line.—M. S."

If you really want to make that yellow guest room smart, use touches of brown to add character. I have sketched an idea for you here. Mark your material apart and then make the tassels with little dashes about six inches as shown. For the bedspread, reverse the color scheme, using yellow tassels on brown material. Several rows of the tassels may make a border for spread or curtains instead of an all-over design if desired.

Now is the time for all of us to give our houses a fresh start. Crisp new curtains; a bright slipcover; new lampshades; or an ottoman will do the trick. Make these things yourself. Mrs. Spears' Book 1—SEWING, for the Home Decorator, shows you how with step-by-step, easy to follow sketches. Book 2, Gifts, Novelties

TIPS to Gardeners

Making the Garden Pay

VEGETABLE gardens are grown to provide fresher, more nourishing food for the family, and to conserve on food bills. Therefore, crops must be wisely chosen and systematically planted.

According to Walter H. Nixon, vegetable expert, the most important vegetables considered both for food value and garden space required are: Beans, cabbage, carrots, beets, squash, tomatoes, onions, peas and spinach.

To get the most from garden space, plant two crops of spinach, one in spring, the other in late summer. Plant Chinese cabbage and parsnips about midsummer in space occupied earlier by beans, radishes and peas. Make successive plantings of carrots and beets for a steady supply of small tender roots.

Plant bush beans and beets on both sides of tomato rows. When tomatoes need the space, those earlier crops will have been pulled and used.

Corn can be worked into the garden plan even though there is not much space. Plant spinach or beets or green onions between rows of slower-growing corn. Then grow pole beans (cornfield beans) to climb on the corn stalks.

IT'S A HIT! The NEW Firestone CHAMPION TIRE

Because IT'S THE ONLY TIRE MADE WITH THE NEW SAFETY-LOCK CORD BODY and GEAR-GRIP TREAD

CAR OWNERS everywhere are acclaiming the extra blowout protection and non-skid safety of the new Firestone Champion Tire. And automobile manufacturers, knowing its outstanding performance, have adopted it for their new 1939 models. On every hand you hear, "It's the most effective tire we have ever had on wet pavement and in mud and snow!" It's the hit of 1939!

The Firestone Champion Tire is a completely new achievement in safety engineering and the result of a new and revolutionary means of locking greater safety into the cord body of a tire. This is accomplished first by the use of a new type of tire cord called "Safety-Lock," in which the cotton fibers are more compactly interwoven to give greater strength. And then the fibers in each individual cord, the cords in each ply and the plies themselves are all securely locked together by a new and advanced Firestone process of Gum-Dipping, which provides amazingly greater strength—and greater strength means greater safety.

The new Safety-Lock cord construction gives the added strength that makes possible the use of the new thicker, tougher, deeper Firestone Gear-Grip Tread, which provides remarkably longer non-skid mileage. This sensational new

World's Safest Driver

Ab Jenkins, holder of 87 world records for safety, speed and endurance, who has driven more than a million and a half miles on Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires without an accident, says, "On the highway or on the highway, I insist upon the extra safety of Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires on my cars."

tread is called "Gear-Grip" because of its unique design which has more than three thousand sharp-edged angles that grip the road with a sure-footed hold to protect against skidding and to assure a safe stop.

Have your Firestone Dealer or Firestone Auto Supply and Service Store equip your car with a set of new Firestone Champion Tires, the only tires made that are safety-proved on the speedway for your protection on the highway.
